COMMON WAYS THIEVES STEAL IDENTITIES

Phishing

Phony emails or websites that are designed to pilfer personal information and passwords.

Tax scams

Fraudsters email or call taxpayers to "confirm" identifying information, such as a Social Security number.

Malware

Clicking on unfamiliar links installs malicious software on devices and steals personal data or drains bank accounts.

Dumpster-diving or mail theft

Using old utility bills or statements, fraudsters can create new credit card accounts in your name.

A trusted family member, friend or coworker rips you off

This kind of fraud can take months or years to detect, as the damage mounts.

PROTECTION TIPS

Shred everything with your name and address on it.

Use credit cards with chip or EMV technology whenever possible.

Secure sensitive paper documents.

Install antivirus and antispyware programs on devices.

Periodically check online bank and credit card statements.
